There is every prospect that the com ing county agricultural fair will be far the best ever held in Oak Dale Park. The farmers seem interested as they never were before. The Secretary of the association, Mr. Greeley, is in receipt of numerous letters making enquiry with reference to the premium list and other matters, and these com not only from various sections of our own county but from neighboring counties. We believe there is no sounty in this part of the State, except saline, which has not succeeded in having successful fairs each fall : and now that the matter is almost entirely in the hands of the farmers we can no see why our own fair can not be made just as successful as all others. It is necessary, of course, that there should be a friendly, enthusiastic co-operation among the farmers, and we believe such a co-operation will be effected The premium list will be ready for distribution in a few weeks. The pre miums offered are very liberal—especially the stock premiums. We under stand that nearly enough money has been already guaranteed to pay these premiums, independent of the "gate money." Mrs. Hall has been suffering from that subtle enemy to human life, consumption, for some time. For the past year she has most courageously, and with heroism unexcelled, borne up against the invidious shaft which death was aiming at her life. She was a woman of most excellent graces, making no professions but them made by a life as spotless as the snow-drift. Generous in sentiment, gentle in disposition, charitable to all, and kindly, her life shed but one ray, and that of loyeliness, upon all around her. In all the relations of life, Mrs. Hall was exemplary, and leaves a record of womanly graces worth of emulation, and without a blemish. She leaves behind her many and hearts at her taking off. "From the volcalem life in the unreplying dead there considered without a blemish of death; the unreplying dead there considered without a blemish of death; the unreplying dead there considered without a blemish of death; the unreplying dead there considered without a blemish of death; the unreplying dead there considered without a blemish of death; the unreplying dead there considered whether he had better say anything in favor of enforcing the laws of not. There occurred, Tuesday of this week, on affhir that almost cost a human life. It was not the fault of the perpetrators that It did not, for it seems their intentions were murderous. The particulars, as near as we could learn em, are as follows:

On last Friday a couple of covered wagons were wending their way west ward, occupied by two men and fol-lowed by a few head of cattle. They were passing by the residence of Mr. James Madden, a peaceable and highly respected farmer living about five miles northwest of Bavaria, when a calf belonging to Mr. Madden broke loose and followed the cattle belonging to the wagons. Nothing more was heard from the wayfarers until last Monday, when they returned to Mr. Madden's and claimed that they could not drive the calf back, as it had been severely bitten by dogs. They said they would buy the calf, but owing to its condition did not consider it worth much. There was no one at home but Mrs. Madden and she told them that her husband did not want to sell it. They insisted on buying the calf, and finally left seven dollars on the table in payment for the same, not withstanding the lady kept telling them that her husband would not sell it. They then left the house, saying their camp was a few miles west of Brookville.

The next morning James Maddet in company with a brother John took the money they had left and started to recover his property. They found the stated, and also discovered the calf in good condition. Mr. Madden explained his business, and claimed his property. Some words passed between the parties, and the movers showed fight. One of them picked up a good-sized stone and hurled it at Mr. Madden striking him on the head, inflicting an ugly wound. He then ran to his wagon for his pistol, and by mistake picked up an old one that was not loaded. Discovering the mistake, he ran up to Madden and struck him a terrible blow on the head, mashing the skull and inflicting, as is thought, a fatal wound He then grabbed an old ax that lay close by, doubtless intending to complete the dastardly outrage. He only eded, nowever, in dealing him a slight blow in the back, when Mr. John Madden came to the rescue of his brother. Both of the men with the teams then turned on John, and probably would have served him equally bad but for the fact that he showed he was armed, drawing a revolver and in session all the week. A number of shooting one of the men in the shoulder, bringing him to the ground. But if the man could not fight be could talk, and as he lay there bleeding he urged his partner not to let them get away, as he was shot. But John drew his revolver on the remaining assailant causing him to keep at a safe distance while he helped his brother onto his horse, and they returned from the further trouble. At this date Mr. James Madden lies at his father's residence, five and a half miles northwest of Bavaria, in very critical condition. Medical ald was summoned at once. The extent of the injuries was not accertained at the hour of our advices last even the brain was injured. The skull, about two inches above the left ear, is terri bly fractured and he was cut in the back, as also on the arm, with the ax. Both of the men making the assault have since been arrested.

It makes, week after week, cowardly assaults upon our city and county officers, never daring to make special charges, but by inuendoes endeavor to imply that they are not doing their duty.—Herald.

We have endeavored to be very plain in our charges. We charged that the discussing various motions filed by the Sheriff and County Attorney-whose special duty it is to bring all violators of the liquor law to justice-have tried will take several days yet to finish the to shield one John Ryan, saloon-keeper, and prevent his prosecution for selling liquor illegally. One reason for their doing this was because they are the best witnesses of the fact themselves, having drank liquor in his estoon repeated since the let of Mayone of them (perhaps both of them)

The same paper a short time since engaged in a wholesale war on gamb-lers, and then in a weak and service spirit went to the prominent men sup-posed to be engaged in that business and abjectly apologised, mying: "I only mean to injure one man, but am armid to single him out alone."—Her-

The tool knows that he tells a willful lie when he says the above. We have never apologised to anybody for our attack on the gamblers, nor do we propose to do so. Gambling had become so open and defiant and diagraceful that we felt it our duty to do what we could to belp suppress it. The city officers would do nothing to suppress it, the highly-moral Herald became at once the gambiers' organ, and we had to fight the battle alone. We did the best we could, and the samblers do not ply their trade near so publicly as formerly. We are ready to continue the warfare on gambling, but we want some assistance from those whose duty it is to enforce the laws against gamb-

The fact is you brought the policy to me May 23rd, and after telling me all the circumstances, I advised you that all that was necessary, was for Mr. D. W. Smith to have Miss Laura Bowman assign and transfer the policy to you and your wife according to Smith's wish. On the 3rd o June you brought the assignment of the policy by Miss Bowman to you and your wife, duly executed, to me. I then informed you it was sufficient in law, there could have been no skullduggery or sharp practice about it, for Smith requested it, and Miss Bowman sasigned it before Smith's death. I did not deem it absolutely essential that the assign-ment abould be on the policy itself; this was on a separate piece of paper So it was properly signed. Yours, JOHN G. SPIVEY.
